Do you want to help Cleveland Police and Crime Commissioner, Steve Turner, hold Cleveland Police to account in their running an effective and efficient police service?

The Office of the Police and Crime Commissioner is currently looking for a Standards, Scrutiny and Accountability Officer. The postholder will play a vital role in ensuring Cleveland Police is delivering a good service for communities, by working on a high-quality scrutiny and accountability programme.

You will have a keen interest in national, regional and local issues related to policing and crime and through horizon scanning identify topics the PCC could highlight in his scrutiny meetings. You will analyse key performance information to prioritise areas for scrutiny. In addition, as part of the role you will maintain a scrutiny and accountability tracker, a key tool in documenting what the PCC has scrutinised along with a forward plan of scrutiny topics and following up on key actions.

Now, more than ever, it is a really interesting time to be involved in police scrutiny and accountability and if you think you are the right candidate who can bring a desire for public service improvement and a mix of experience in policy analysis and development, performance management and record keeping then we'd like to hear from you.
